KALEM ESSANAY PATHE

Of special interest to the people of Gettysburg will be the reel: JOHN BURNS OF GETTYSBURG—Kalem War Story
A Kalem civil war drama based upon Bret Harte's celebrated poem. Most every one knows how John Burns, during the battle here, dressed in his best suit and high hat and joined the forces to help defeat the Rebels. He was the butt of the soldiers' jests but his calm determination and seeming immunity inspired the regulars. He declined to take the shelter of the trenches, but stood before the enemy, quietly ramming his musket and firing shot after shot at the Confederates.

THE DISCOVERY—Essanay Comedy
The father and his son each fall in love with a young stenographer, and later make an astounding discovery. With FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN as the son.

THE CHEAPEST WAY—Pathe Comedy
A crafty old farmer thinks to marry his daughter off would be the cheapest way, and he helps the lovers all he can.

ALL VETERANS of the Civil War are invited to attend the show to night FREE OF CHARGE.

SHOW STARTS 6:30.

PRESIDENT HAS NOT ACCEPTED

Mr. Wilson Invited to Gettysburg but Has not yet Accepted the Invitation. News Concerning Other Prominent People.

President Wilson has been invited to attend the Battle Anniversary celebration but has not yet accepted the invitation. This is authoritative. Invitations to the governors of the various states, the cabinet officers and other distinguished persons desired here as the guests of the State in July, are now being issued but there is nothing definite yet on which to announce their acceptances.

While President Wilson has not accepted the invitation to be here in July, he has not declined, and it is understood, on good authority, that he is now trying to arrange his appointments so as to make the Gettysburg trip possible. It is thought most probable that he will be here. Vice President Marshall has not yet accepted his invitation, either, and it is not stated whether or not he is to be expected.

The matter of securing the attendance of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall is entirely in the hands of the Governor, according to a statement made this morning to a representative of The Times by Colonel Lewis E. Beiler, secretary of the Battle Anniversary Commission. The invitations to other distinguished guests are in the hands of the commission. Many of these, declared Colonel Beiler, were on his desk ready for approval before being sent out while the invitations to the governors of the various states are now being issued.

Twenty-two thousand requests for free transportation had been received by Colonel Beiler from Pennsylvania veterans last evening. Owing to the fact that June 1 came on a Sunday an extra day was given the old soldiers to make their requests and a grand total, 7,000 in advance of the original estimate, was reached. It is expected that one-fifth of those who have asked for free transportation will not come to Gettysburg for one reason or another.

Preparations here are going along with all haste possible.

On Monday the erection of the large general hospital on the Kurtz playground was commenced and a number of the tents are in position.

The work of erecting the latrines at various places in town is being pushed along.

The Reading railroad had a force of 150 men at work here on Sunday and a large number of men are at work every day. The building of a path from Washington street to the new yards has been nearly finished. It is located at the side of the new driveway.

The first carload of oil for the state roads entering Gettysburg was received this morning and will be put to use at once.

An iron flagpole measuring 100 feet in height is being put up at the southern end of the camp.

Thirty-two sanitary drinking fountains and seven hydrants are being put up while the erection of tents continues.

BATTLEFIELD FAKE CAUGHT

Old Theory about Equestrian Statues is Branded as without Foundation and Guides are Notified to Tell Story no More.

A popular supposition on battlefield matters has come to naught. The guides have been notified to desist fooling the tourist and one of the favorite stories for the past quarter of a century is a thing of the past.

For years every visitor to Gettysburg has been told, when viewing the various equestrian statues, that when a horse stands with two feet raised it indicates that the general in the saddle was killed here, that when one foot was raised the general was injured, and that when the horse stands on all its feet the rider escaped unharmful. All the statues on the Gettysburg battlefield bear out this idea and it is safe to say that one-half the population of Gettysburg believed the story to be absolutely correct. On other battlefields the theory does not hold.

Recently, in order to establish definitely the question, Mr. John M. Blocher, of Carlisle street, wrote a letter to Bureau Brothers, of Philadelphia, who have erected a number of the equestrian statues here—among them the recently completed Sedgwick monument. Their answer says:

Dear Sir:—

Your communication received. In reference to there being any significance attached to the position of the equestrian statues—that is, as to the standing of the horse on different feet—we would state that it has no meaning. In other words it is the conception of the sculptor modeling the figure, as to which is the most spirited position, as to the ideal.

Very truly yours,
Bureau Brothers.

Some time ago members of the National Park Commission had their attention called to the habit of the battlefield guides telling the story about the statues and the significance of the horse's position. All the guides were cautioned and instructed that the story was incorrect and that they should cease telling it.

TOOK LONG SLIDE

W. M. Freight Car Breaks From Train near Thurmont.

A Western Maryland freight, eastward bound, figured in a peculiar accident near Thurmont, when a car loaded with dressed meat suddenly broke from the center of the train of more than 15 cars and rolled down the mountain-side near Hunting Creek Gap, about two miles west of Thurmont.

The derailed car rolled for a distance of more than 200 feet and when it finally stopped, it was a complete wreck, with the contents, consisting of all kinds of dressed meats, strewn along the mountain-side.

The place where the car was derailed is just east of the large steel viaduct, known as the "high bridge" across the Hunting Creek Gap. Along this portion of the railroad the tracks have been laid in shelves cut from the mountain-side and for a distance of several miles, the distance to level ground is 175 feet sheer. At portions of the mountain the ground slopes down naturally for a distance of about two or three hundred feet.

GOOD MARKET

Large Market and Fine Country Vegetables and Fruits.

This morning saw the first large market of the year. Strawberries were on sale in such abundance that not all were disposed of during market hours. The quality was exceptionally fine and the berries sold for 10 and 15 cents a box. The variety of other good things was large for this season of the year and the patrons of the market found the early morning trip to Centre Square well worth while.

MORE TROUBLE IN EMMITSBURG

Ex-Mayor Rowe now Accused of Refusing to Give up Borough Papers which he Has in his Possession.

Charging that he refuses to give up records and dockets of the municipality of Emmitsburg, of which he was once burgess, mandamus proceedings have been filed against Edward H. Rowe, the former burgess of the town.

The suit was brought by Attorney Vincent Sebald, of the town, on behalf of the burgess and commissioners. They charge that Mr. Rowe has in possession the ordinance book of the town, the minute book, the corporate seal and his docket as burgess. As burgess Mr. Rowe tried all cases of violation of town ordinances and as there were appeals taken from his decisions, etc., the possession of this docket, as well as the ordinance book and the minutes mean much to the city.

It is stated that the new burgess John H. Matthews, who recently defeated Mr. Rowe, and who has qualified as burgess, is practically helpless in the office without these records. It is charged in the petition that Mr. Rowe has repeatedly refused to deliver them, claiming one or more of the books in question belong to him.

Judge Worthington gave Rowe until June 5 to file an answer, provided a notice of the proceedings was served on or before June 2. The court will later set a date for a hearing in the case, unless Mr. Rowe, by his answer, agrees to surrender the books in question.

As will be recalled Mr. Rowe lately has been having very turbulent times. Some time ago he was arrested at Emmitsburg, charged with interference in the election—proceedings against John W. Breichner, and fined for contempt of court. He refused to pay and was taken to Frederick and released. Later he was arrested on charges of forgery and embezzlement and these charges are now pending and a further hearing in the case will be held next Friday. Mr. Rowe is seeking his release from these charges through habeas corpus proceedings.

ALUMNI BANQUET

High School Alumni Elect Officers and Hold Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Gettysburg High School Alumni Association was held Wednesday evening at the Eagle Hotel. The banquet was preceded by a business meeting in which the secretary and treasurer both gave their reports. The following officers were elected for the coming year: president Luther Musselman; vice president, Claire Sowers; secretary, Miss Reba Miller; treasurer, Edgar Miller.

There is a considerable amount of money in the treasury, and it was decided to keep this until next year when a handsome gift will be purchased for the school. It was also decided that married members may not bring husbands or wives into the association. Last year it was decided that they might.

The supper followed the business meeting and was enjoyed immensely, after which the toasts were given.

The first toast was by John Blocher who welcomed the class of 1913. Claire Sowers, president of the class of 1913, responded. Other toasts were "Alumni Retrospect", by Calvin Gilbert; "The Alumni behind the Footlights", Miss Cope; "The Class of '03", Raymond Topper; "The Alumni Prospects", Prof. W. A. Burgoon. The speakers on the impromptu list were: J. Calvin Hartman, Luther Musselman and Donald Hake.

COLLEGE FOOT BALL SCHEDULE

Schedule for the Coming Season is Announced. Four Excursions Likely to be Run. Reserves have Schedule.

Manager Clyde Fasick of the college foot ball team has arranged the following schedule for next fall:

Sept. 20, Bloomsburg Normal, at home; Sept. 27, University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; Oct. 4, Albright, at home; Oct. 11, State College at State College; Oct. 18, Muhlenberg, at home; Oct. 25, open; Nov. 1, Dickinson, at Carlisle; Nov. 8, Mt. St. Mary's, at home; Nov. 15, Bucknell, at Harrisburg; Nov. 22, Johns Hopkins, at Baltimore; Nov. 27, Franklin and Marshall, at Lancaster.

It will be noticed that the annual games with the University of Pennsylvania, State, Muhlenberg, Dickinson, Mt. St. Mary's and Bucknell, appear on the schedule. In addition to these games athletic relations are resumed with Johns Hopkins, and Franklin and Marshall, while Bloomsburg Normal and Albright appear for the first time. Ursinus is among the missing.

Care has been taken to reduce the probability of a cancellation of the first game of the season to a minimum, by scheduling a school team instead of an athletic association. It is important that this game be made certain, because it affords an opportunity to get a line on the material for the Penn game that comes the following Saturday.

Although not officially announced, it is quite probable that excursions will be run to Philadelphia for the U. of P. game, to Carlisle for the Dickinson game, to Baltimore for the Hopkins game, and to Harrisburg for the Bucknell game.

Prospects for a successful football season for Gettysburg next season are bright. This year will graduate some valuable men, but a strong nucleus will remain. Mauthe, the star half back of last year's undefeated Penn State team, will coach Gettysburg this year.

The following schedule has been arranged for the Reserves: Sept. 27, Williamson Trade School, at Media; Oct. 18, Mercersburg Reserves, at Mercersburg; Nov. 1, Dickinson Reserves, at Carlisle; Nov. 12, Navy Plebes, at Annapolis; Nov. 22, Yeagerstown A. C., at Yeagerstown.

OIL ON STREET

Gas Company By-Product being used on Chambersburg Street.

Residents of Chambersburg street, beyond the first square, are putting on a coating of one of the by-products of the local gas plant instead of using the tarvia which has been employed as a dust layer in other sections of town. Several small sections were tried with the new treatment and the experiment proved satisfactory. The street sweeper of the Pugh & Hubbard Company which cleans off the dirt raises so much dust that people make a rush to lower all windows whenever it appears. The apparatus shows better than anything else just how much loose dust has been on the streets. Local people continue to sweep out their stores and homes and place the sweepings on the streets, in spite of the warning of council that they would be prosecuted if the custom continued.

MARVELS OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

How Creatures Invisible to the Eye Are Shown as Monsters.

Photographing the invisible sounds like a monster, but correct to say invisible by the unaided eye. This complex and valuable science is revealing wonders in the excessively minute, and myriad objects, animate and inanimate, are brought to view whose existence has all along been unknown. Two methods of illuminating the objects are in use—strong light is passed through very thin layers of the substance or reflected from the outside surface of thick masses and also from the external portions of exceedingly small opaque bodies.

These solid particles can be placed on glass slides or floated in transparent liquids, as a drop of water between two very thin glasses. Pinch the glasses close together; there is no danger of killing the smaller kinds of animals, such as bacteria and microbes. They have plenty of room in a film of water so thin as to be beyond imagination.

The magnifying lenses for expansion of images of these minute objects require the most consummate skill in manufacture, the microcamera likewise, and the two combined are triumphs of human genius. The finished products, the perfected pictures, are highly educational. Many different kinds of greatly improved glass are now made in Jena, Germany, and these have almost revolutionized microscopy. And the wonders accomplished by using the most sensitive plates ever made, and these with many different kinds of waves of light, are almost beyond comprehension.

The "Arabian Nights" people are eclipsed. Thus put a drop of stagnant water on glass, lay a thin plate upon it, press down, and the layer of water will be thin indeed. Put it under the microscope, turn bright light through the layer, pass this light into the very small camera and let it fall on a prepared moving film; then the amazing effect of animals in motion is to be fixed on a film that is itself in motion. This film, a long strip, is then placed on rollers and unwound, so that it will pass powerful projecting lenses in a moving picture outfit.

This is, indeed, photographing the unknown. Since man appeared on earth no such aid to refined research into nature's labyrinth has been discovered. Then a large audience can see all that there is in a minute drop of water on a screen from ten to sixteen feet in diameter. Truly invisible creatures become monsters and move with great rapidity before the eyes of the people. Thousands of new species of minute living organisms are rescued from realms of the unknown. —Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Bamboos as Water Pitchers.

In the Hawaiian Islands the natives carry their supply of water about with them in long bamboo tubes, the joints of which have been knuckled out. Girls may be seen making their way to water by springs with the family "water jug." They patiently fill the long hollow in the bamboo with water, blocking up the end with a wooden plug. This is then carried to the hut and lasts the family for several days, keeping cool and sweet in this novel receptacle. The larger bamboo trunks are used in the same way as receptacles for storing various household commodities. —World Wide Magazine.

There is a quaint and interesting communistic society—one of the few that have survived to the present time—at South Amana, not far from Iowa City, Ia. While their economic views and their ideas touching courtship, marriage and domestic life are peculiar, the way they do some other things might well be patterned after. One such is the way they manage their slaughter house. This has cement floors and is in other respects neat and well kept. As soon as an animal is killed and dressed all the offal is buried in a big stove instead of being thrown out for dogs to devour or to decay and contaminate the neighboring atmosphere. As soon as the meat is hung up women come in and scrub and mop the cement floor, so that the room is clean and free from any odor.

Always take the short cut, and that is the rational one. Therefore say and do everything according to the soundest reason. —Marcus Aurelius.

PRESIDENT TO PROLONG SESSION

Wants Currency and Philippine Legislation.

MAY QUIT LATE IN FALL

Washington, June 3. — President Wilson's legislative program for congress this summer, as communicated to some of the members of the inner circle, through those within the confidence of the executive, involves these points:

The enactment of the Underwood tariff bill, substantially as it was passed by the house of representatives.

The enactment of a currency measure along lines which are now working out. This bill will be ready within the next three or four weeks.

The enactment of legislation affecting the Philippines, looking toward their ultimate independence.

The keeping of congress in session throughout the summer and well toward the first of December, in fact, until just a few days before Thanksgiving, when a brief holiday period will be allowed.

The making of the present extraordinary session the "long session" and the forthcoming regular session, which is usually the "long session," the "short session," thus reversing the previous practice.

The president takes the position, as he has plainly told some of his immediate advisers, that the Democrats came into power, with the expectation that they would accomplish results and that with the least possible delay; moreover, that members of congress are paid annual and seasonal salaries, and that when the exigencies of the situation and the demands of the country necessitate it they should not hesitate to work the year around.

He is willing and anxious to remain in Washington throughout the summer and will insist that members of congress do the same, even throughout the fall.

The president wants the tariff bill enacted just as soon as possible, so that it may have more than a year of operation before the people are called upon to approve or condemn it at the congressional elections of 1914.

He wants the same condition to prevail with respect to financial legislation. That is, he wants a fair try-out of these measures and he wants to be able to say that his administration has done something.

He believes that if the people have an opportunity to see these measures working a sufficient length of time, they will endorse them. Again, he wants to assure the business interests of the country a stable financial system which will tend to offset any feeling of apprehension which some of them may have with regard to the tariff act.

In the third place the president recognizes the demand of the Baltimore platform with respect to the Philippines. But there is another and more important consideration with respect to this feature of the program. The tendency to be hanged, Everitt received will be any serious trouble with Japan as a result of the California alien law, but if in the future there should be any international complications arising out of conditions in the Far East the United States would be in a much better position if it were not called upon to defend its holdings in the Philippines and if the question of the future of the islands were to be settled with the recognition of other nations of the purpose of this country toward them, what might otherwise be a serious menace would be obviated.

CONFESSES MURDER

On Trial, Sunbury Resident Blamed Another, Since Sentenced to Hang.
Sunbury, Pa., June 3.—David Everitt made a written confession to District Attorney Strauss that he murdered Henry E. Miller, in this place, last year.

When on trial for his participation in the crime he placed the blame for the murder upon Frederick Nye, who was his companion, and Nye was sentenced to be hanged. Everitt received a sentence for manslaughter.

The case was taken to the supreme court, which declined to interfere, and an appeal is now pending before the pardon board. Robbery was the motive for the murder.

ALFRED AUSTIN DIES IN ENGLAND

British Post Laureate Passes Away, Aged 77 Years.

London, June 3. — Alfred Austin, British poet laureate since 1896, died at the age of seventy-seven years. He succeeded Lord Tennyson, who died in 1892.

The poet laureate died at his home, Swinford, Old Manor, Ashford, Kent, where he had been ill for some time.

Alfred Austin, like many of his predecessors in the laureateship, did not rank as a great poet in any sense. The selection of a man for this honor is largely influenced by the political considerations of his time, and with rare exceptions, the distinction is not bestowed according to literary merit or with that "poetic justice" that is supposed to rule in the more prosaic affairs of life.

Theoretically the laureate is the personal selection of the sovereign, in reality the available bards are "weeded out" by the prime minister much the same as the list of claimants to any public office, and the political predictions as well as the political sponsors of the candidates are weighed in scales not always evenly balanced by a goddess not always blindfolded.

At the time of Austin's appointment he had as formidable competitors Kipling and Watson, but neither the genius of the one nor the recognized talent of the other could avail against the considerations mentioned. There were also living then other poets who loomed large in the English world of letters, such as Swinburne and Stephen Phillips, whose claim to the honor seemed to the wide world of critical readers not unworthy of consideration.

START SEXHYGIENE CRUSADE

Movement For Healthy Marriages Begun by Washington Women.

Washington, June 3. — Mrs. John Hays Hammond has launched a movement here for "healthy marriages."

At her home Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. William Jennings Bryan and other well known officials and society circle women of Washington met and discussed ways and means to prevent the marriage of the physically and mentally unfit.

A women's clinic will be held in Washington with a view to interesting women of all classes. An educational campaign is to be conducted. Practical eugenics is to be taught. Already $1000 has been contributed to help the work forward.

Dr. Elnora Folkmar, a hygienic sex expert, spoke plainly to the women who assembled at Mrs. Hammond's home. She advocated the examination by health officers of men and women before they receive marriage licenses.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST DOCTORS

BROKE BACKS OF DOGS

It is Charged They Dropped Twenty Animals From Roof of Building, Prominent Surgeon Implicated.

Philadelphia, June 3.—Following an investigation that has been in progress for several months, warrants will be served on one of the most prominent surgeons in the country charging him with unnecessary and cruel and barbarous treatment of defenseless animals.

The accused surgeon is a member of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, and his associates and assistants will also be implicated in the charges that have been made against him.

The prosecutor in the case is the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and four wealthy women, and who are socially prominent, are providing the means for prosecution.

This is not a crusade of anti-vivisectionists; it is because of the fact that the society charges extreme cruelty. It is charged that the surgeons and university physicians resorted to the inhuman practice of dropping twenty dogs off the roof of the medical laboratory so as to break the backs of the animals in order that they might better study the functions of the motor and sensory of the spinal column. Delicate operations that invariably end in death are among other accusations.

It is charged that the animals that have been operated on are forced to live in kennels with other animals and that they often have had their wounds torn open by dogs and cats that could not resist the sight of blood, and that unnecessary sufferings have resulted. Other animals have been partially dissected and important organs removed.

The detectives, it is charged, attended class demonstrations and took part in some of the experiments so as to be able to tell just what had happened in the physiological laboratories.

EDIT R WINS SUIT

William R. Nelson, of Kansas City Star, Not Guilty of Contempt.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 3.—The Missouri supreme court discharged William R. Nelson, owner and editor of the Kansas City Star, from contempt of the Jackson county circuit court. The decision of the court was unanimous.

The supreme court held that the article published in the Star was a temporary one and that Nelson's discharge from contempt solely on the ground that Circuit Judge Guthrie prepared his opinion the night before the trial for contempt.

Judge Woodson, who wrote the opinion held that Mr. Nelson was not guilty of contempt on the part of the accused. He also found that Judge Guthrie in preparing his finding the night before Mr. Nelson was haled into court "violated a plain and fundamental rule of right," and sought to deprive the prisoner of his right without process of law.

William R. Nelson, editor and owner of the Kansas City Star, was found guilty of contempt of court and sentenced to imprisonment of one day in the county jail on Feb. 1 last by Circuit Judge Joseph C. Guthrie, of Jackson county, who based his action upon the publication in Mr. Nelson's paper of an article which said that Judge Guthrie had refused to dismiss a divorce suit filed in his court until the parties to it, who had settled it out of court and asked dismissal, had paid their attorney fees.

There is a story told of Grammont, who one day dined in state with Charles II. of England. Charles bade the count to notice that the servants kneel while they served the dishes, a mark of respect to guests of the king not common at other courts. "I thank your majesty for the explanation," answered Grammont. "I thought they were begging pardon for giving you so bad a dinner."

HE WAS IN THE GAME.

To Prove It He Showed Where the Other Side Made a Hit.

Frank I. Cobb, chief editorial writer of the New York World, was a great baseball player while he was at college in Michigan. During vacations he accumulated strength and a little extra money by "working" in a lumber camp and playing catcher on the camp team. (The word "working" is put in quotation marks advisedly.) Young Cobb and his pitcher, Eganagan, formed a splendid battery, and all the players in games against rival camps with great regularity. The battery worked so well that on a certain Saturday they were hired at $10 each and expenses to play on the team of Svenson and Stefansson, a score of miles away. They had to pretend to be Swedes, of course, and they were down on the score card as Larsen, pitcher, and Olsen, catcher.

At a dinner in Washington not long ago Mr. Cobb had the pleasure of meeting Senator Julius C. Burrows of Michigan and found him a delightful companion. Mr. Burrows seemed to find the dignified young editor very entertaining, too, especially when the talk turned to baseball, for Mr. Burrows was a "fan" in the superlative degree. "The boys in my lumber camp have a team," he declared, "that has never been beaten."

"Didn't the team from Svenson and Stefansson's camp beat them some years ago, senator?" asked Mr. Cobb innocently.

"No, sir," cried Mr. Burrows, turning hot as if the battle were again going on before him. "No, sir! They didn't beat us. Confound 'em, they put in two ringers as a battery and were leading our boys by 7 to 4 in the eighth when we found out about it and ran 'em off the field and most of the way home."

"The score was 7 to 3, wasn't it, senator?" asked Cobb politely.

"No-o-o-yes, I believe it was," Mr. Burrows admitted. "That's so; the umpire didn't allow our fourth tally because the runner didn't touch second. But how did you know the score?"

"I was there," said Mr. Cobb, turning the left side of his head toward Mr. Burrows. "See that seat? That's where they caught me with half a brick as I was going over the fence. I was Olsen."—Harper's Weekly.

The Kiss She Sold.

They held a charity bazaar in Paris not long ago, where one of the most beautiful of the French actresses offered one of her kisses at auction.

The bidding soared higher and higher amid a fever of excitement until it reached 20,000 francs. "Any advance on 20,000 francs?" asked the fair auctioneer, flushed with pride at the value placed on one of her kisses, of which she had a number in reserve. Then, amid a silence that was almost painful in its intensity, the dainty hammer fell. "To you, monsieur!" she said, smiling bewitchingly at an old gentleman. "Madame," was the answer. "I am profoundly honored. But such prices are not for old age, so with madame's gracious permission I will depute the honor to my grandchild," and, raising a sweet little boy in his arms, he received his kiss by proxy amid thunders of cheers and delighted laughter.

An Important Question.

Professor Bliss Perry likes to tell this story about a suffrage meeting which a friend of his attended.

After considerable business had been disposed of by the suffragettes one of their number made a motion that the women living in the town where the meeting was held should endeavor at the next election to place a woman on the school board. The presiding officer said, referring to the motion, "Is there any question?" For a few moments there was silence. Then a shrill voice far up in the gallery said sweetly, "Will you please tell us how you get that smooth effect over the hips?"

A Bit of Chinese Fun.

The love of fun is not unknown among the serious looking Celestials who during the last decade have been collecting in the Australian colonies.

A storekeeper, wishing to advertise his wares in the Chinese language, engaged a Chinese to paint a sign, expecting, of course, that it would be a very enticing one. It did not answer his expectations, however, for the only perceptible effect it had on "the relatives of the sun and moon," as the Chinese term themselves, was to excite a grin of broadest dimensions.

At length the storekeeper, by a considerable bribe, obtained a translation in English of the advertisement and found that it read as follows:

"Don't buy anything here—storekeeper is a rogue."

That sign came down in a jiffy, and the storekeeper spent the next week looking for the ingenious sign painter.

Patti's Burning Admirer.

Once in Italy a card was brought to Mme. Patti from a man whose name she did not know, but who was so very anxious to see her that she allowed him to be shown into her room. When the unknown came in he proved to be a little old man who was quivering and speechless with nervousness. Suddenly Patti noticed smoke coming out of his coat, so without saying a word she seized a glass of water and threw it over him. It turned out that the old man had put his lighted cigar into his pocket when he entered the room and so had set fire to his coat. "Sir," said Mme. Patti. "I have had many admirers who professed themselves burning with admiration for me, but I have never before met one who went so far as to set himself on fire to prove it."

It is said that the hottest mines in the world are those of the famous Comstock lode. On the lower levels the heat is so great that the men cannot work over ten or fifteen minutes at a time. Every known means of mitigating the heat has been tried in vain. Ice melts before it reaches the bottom of the shafts.

A Theory

By GRACE OGLESBY

This is an age of reform or at least new formations, and such an age is always attended by a certain amount of hysteria. When people leave a beaten track to strike out into new paths they are liable to bewilderment, and so when they find or believe they have found that they have been influenced by false ideas in seizing new ones they are prone to jump from the frying pan into the fire. More than this, they are liable to jump from terra firma into water altogether too deep for them.

One of the new departures of the present day is a dissatisfaction with marriage as we in America have known it. Kent Blakeman's father and mother had lived together comfortably, bringing up half a dozen children. Kent at twenty-five discovered that they had taken a great risk in binding themselves so closely to each other that there was no easy way for them to break the chain. In their case fortunately they had not wished to break it. But, as for him, he did not intend thus to tie himself up. He believed in experimental marriage.

If he married he would reserve the right to leave his wife as soon as he ceased to love her, and she should have the same privilege with regard to him. Miss Estelle Woodruff, being about the same age as Blakeman, also grew up in the same atmosphere of hysterical reform. She heard persons talking about the frequency of divorce, marriage being a failure and kindred subjects, and her mind was very susceptible to absorb new theories. Blakeman found few women to sympathize with him in his notions about marriage—most reforms begin with a paucity of numbers—and when he met Miss Woodruff and made an easy convert of her he was much pleased with her—that is, he was much pleased with himself for having struck into a new path—and considered the girl above the ordinary in that she had appreciated his ideas.

There is an infinite variety of mental structure among human beings. Blakeman, who married Miss Woodruff, was of a different brain. He kept on developing in his anti-marriage theories, while she, with the coming of children, ceased to take an interest in them and at last turned against them.

Perhaps it was the discovery that he had been mistaken in his wife's mental caliber that started him in his idea that they were not fitted for each other. Their union had lost its romance and was becoming humdrum. It seemed to him that the consummated kiss morning and night had lost its zest. He had asserted when a bachelor that the honeymoon should last always and that when it had completely waned it was time for the couple to separate and each find a new mate.

Time came when Blakeman concluded to "be true to himself," as he put it, and claim the privilege he had reserved for himself when he married. He made several attempts to get his courage up to a point where he could tell his wife that she was not his affinity and that he proposed to free himself from her and make another trial to find a real and lasting mate. At last he succeeded.

Between a passing influence in youth and a woman who had been made over to speak by the possession of two little children—a boy and a girl—there was an enormous difference. She was not only surprised by her husband's announcement; she was thunderstruck. But if she had not developed she had insensibly come into a lot of horse sense. To attempt to argue her husband out of his nonsense she knew would be futile. To oppose him would be equally so. Moreover, she remembered that at the time of her marriage she had coincided with his views. It was he who had been consistent, she who had changed. It had been mutually agreed that when either wished for freedom it should be granted.

She held to her agreement, though she recognized the outcome as a great misfortune. But she was a plucky as well as a proud woman and gave no sign of what a blow she suffered. The prenuptial agreement gave the children—if any came—to the mother, and this was, of course, a godsend to her. She wondered as she looked back when the provision was made that she had very nearly assented to a conditional proposition to divide the children between husband and wife.

When all preliminary arrangements had been made Mrs. Blakeman and her children—the little ones being ignorant of the separation of their parents—took a train for the mother's birthplace, where they expected to live. Blakeman saw them off and as the train was starting kissed them all and left the car.

He stood on the platform, looking after them as they rolled out of the station, and all of a sudden a great light broke in upon his brain, and he said to himself:

"What an addle pated ninny I have made of myself!"

Going to the ticket office, he bought a ticket for the next train to follow them, and the same night, when the mother was ruefully hearing the children say their prayers, the father swooped down on them like a cyclone and took them all in one embrace.

Has Blakeman given up theory? Never! His theory now is that the family is all there is in the world worth living for, and hereafter he proposes to live for his family only. Since his theory is sound all are happy.

CITIZENS FIND HEETER GUILTY

Says Pittsburgh School Superintendent Acted Improperly.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 3.—S. L. Heeter, superintendent of the Pittsburgh public schools, was found guilty of charges of immorality in the report of the investigation committee of six citizens.

The committee's report was presented to the board of education at a public hearing. Since last Friday it has been in the possession of David B. Oliver, president of the board. He has kept it sealed and opened it for the first time at the board meeting.

The committee found Heeter guilty of making "improper advances and taking unwarranted liberties" with Mrs. W. a former stenographer in his employ; Miss X., a teacher in the public schools, and Miss Y., a former domestic in his home. The three women were designated in the report by the foregoing letters. Their names are given in a letter accompanying the report, which the board will not make public.

An effort was made immediately after the report was read by William Leoffer, a member of the board, to take steps to remove Mr. Heeter. Such hasty action, however, was opposed by other members of the board and Mr. Heeter is to have still another chance for vindication. Under the school code the school head is entitled to a hearing before the board. He has grasped at that chance.

Heeter was not present at the meeting, but was represented by his counsel. The result was telephoned to the superintendent just as soon as the meeting was over.

THINKS WIFE KIDNAPPED

Brooklyn Woman Was Last Seen Rowing Near Coney Island.

New York, June 3.—The disappearance of Mrs. Olga Housman, a Brooklyn milliner, set down at first as a case of drowning, has begun to assume the outlines of a mystery.

Continued search by the police harbor squad and volunteers has failed to reveal any trace of a boat in which she left Plum Beach, near Coney Island, for a short row last Saturday night.

It is possible that she was blown out to sea or that the overturned boat has been lost to view on the marshes. Her husband holds the theory that she has been seized by harbor pirates, so called, and held a prisoner in some secluded spot after having been robbed of $250 which she had on her person.

Washington, June 3.—A suit for $200,000 damages was filed in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by Magnolia V. A. H. The plaintiff alleges she was engaged to marry the congressman and that he had agreed to settle upon her so much of his estate as would make her independent for life. The estate is said to amount to about $700,000.

The word "affectionate" is an instance of how meanings change, for an affectionate person was originally the reverse of agreeable, the word meaning passionate or wilful. John Knox in 1554 writes of "the government of an affectionate woman" being "a rage without reason," and a century later another writer deprecates the evils of affectionate soldiers. And now, as any nursemaid knows, affectionate soldiers have no evils.—London Standard.

SENATORS DENY IMPROPER LOBBY

Have no Knowledge of Sinister Use of Money.

INDIAN ATTORNEY ATTACKED

Ashurst, of Arizona, Says McMurray Is "Smooth" Lobbyist — President Wilson Not to Appear.

Washington, June 3.—The first senators to testify at the senate's investigation of the charge that a lobbyist is working against the tariff bill declared that they know of no improper influences being exerted; no use of money, and had not themselves attempted to improperly influence any other senator.

All admitted having talked with manufacturers interested in the tariff, having heard arguments and protests, but all considered such proceedings strictly legitimate and none considered the men with whom they talked as "lobbyists."

Senator Ashurst, however, declared that "a man named McMurray" had been attempting improperly to influence senators against the movement to cancel certain Indian contracts by which McMurray is said to stand to receive $3,500,000. Senator Borah also referred to "the man Senator Ashurst mentioned."

Just before the committee began taking testimony Chairman Overman and Senator Reed conferred with President Wilson. It was said the president would not be called before the committee, but would transmit any information he might have on the subject of a "lobby."

Senator Ashurst testified that he was not interested directly or indirectly, financially, in the production, manufacture or sale of any article mentioned in the tariff bill or any other bill pending in congress, nor had he sought to influence any other senator.

Senator Ashurst said he had not kept a record of those who had talked with him, but he was prepared to give names of all he could remember. The first was "William Kettner, of California," who had asked him to find out whether or not there would be any further reduction in the tariff on lemons and fruits. The senator asked Chairman Simmons, of the finance committee, who said he thought the Underwood rates would stand.

The senator said he did believe that "a man named McMurray" had been attempting to influence improperly the action of senators with respect to preventing the cancellation of certain contracts he (McMurray) held with the Cherokee Indians for the sale of land, whereby he would receive $3,500,000.

"He is the smoothest lobbyist I ever have seen," added the senator. "He could carry a bundle of eels upstairs without dropping a single one."

Senator Ashurst said he considered any man or woman a "lobbyist" who "bushwhacked senators or members of congress and urged them to vote for certain measures or suffer reprisal at the elections."

"I do not consider a man a lobbyist who files legitimate arguments with congress about matters in which he is interested," the senator said.

Senator Bacon, who followed Senator Ashurst, said that "out of an abundance of caution" he wanted to tell the committee that he owned a small farm in Georgia, on which some article might be raised that was affected by the tariff. A sewer pipe factory, a street railway, a gas company and an electric company were other industries in which Senator Bacon said he had some interest.

"I don't believe any of them are affected by any of this legislation," he said. "I am sure I want no duty on sewer pipe."

F. Church. In the body of the girl were found two bullet wounds from a revolver which was found near the mother leading to the belief that the dying mother shot her daughter rather than have her remain in the world unprotected.

JAPAN ACCEPTS U. S. PEACE PLAN

Indorses the Principle Suggested by Bryan.

Washington, June 3.—Viscount Chinda, ambassador from Japan, called on Secretary Bryan with formal notification that Japan had accepted in principle the plan advanced by the United States for universal peace.

Signatories of the treaty proposed in Mr. Bryan's plan would agree to refrain from hostilities for a period of at least nine months while any conflicting claims were under consideration by an international joint commission.

In the case of Japan, as with the ten other nations that have received the proposal favorably, the response applies solely to the general principle involved, and no nation has committed itself to approval of any of the details of the project. Therefore it may be many months before the tentative draft of the convention which Mr. Bryan submitted to the various embassies and legations can be reduced to a form which will receive their unqualified approval.

The notice by the Japanese ambassador that his government was prepared to give careful and favorable consideration to the peace proposal has no bearing on the negotiations now in progress between the two countries regarding the California alien land legislation.

The Japanese foreign office has not yet called the ambassador definite instructions regarding the submission of its rejoinder to the last American note, and it is shown it is conducting an original investigation as a basis for its rejoinder.

Carving Your Life.

Chisel in hand stood a sculptor boy. With his marble block before him, And his face lit up with a smile of joy As an angel dream passed o'er him. He carved that dream on that shapely stone. With many a sharp incision; With heaven's own light the sculpture shone. He had caught that angel vision. So true of life as we, as we stand, With our souls uncarved before us, Waiting the hour when at God's command Our life dream shall pass o'er us; If we carve it then on the yielding stone. With many a sharp incision, Its heavenly beauty shall be our own. Our lives that angel vision. Bishop Doane.

A Little Bit Awkward.

"It was, to say the least of it," a London letter remarks. "Just a little bit awkward the electric light went out the other evening at the town house of a presumably wealthy widow who had been doing a good deal of political entertaining of late. The guests, to the number of a dozen, had just finished their soup when the unfortunate incident occurred. The scramble to find a sufficient number of candles so that the dinner might proceed was attended with a good deal of difficulty and no little amusement. The butler, who is described as being a bit new to his job, was immediately sent off to telephone to the electric company, report the catastrophe and demand immediate attention to the matter. It was a trying moment for the guests when he returned to the dining room and announced in real cockney accent. 'Please, my lady, the gentleman what's on the telephone says they sent several warning letters unless the account was paid active steps would have to be taken.'—New York Tribune.

THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR WITH A HOLE IN IT.

We all like to think that our own dollar is sound and worth 100 cents. If some one tries to pass us a dollar with a hole in it, or one plugged with lead, we make an emphatic protest.

And yet some of us go along, day by day, letting each of our dollars buy us an average of about 70c. apiece.

All of which comes from the unthrifty American habit of careless spending, or, in other words, buying things in a hurry without thought and consideration.

In a new and bountiful country like ours it is a natural result of too much prosperity.

There is, however, a growing class of people who realize that it pays well to think as they buy. To all such we recommend the advertising pages of THE TIMES which offers reliable information and suggestion to intending purchasers.

A Transmigration Story

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the city of Bangalore, in India, one Kadur, an old man, lay dying. His wife knelt by his bedside—there were no children—waiting for the end and praying to Vishnu in his behalf. In India they believe in the transmigration of souls, and the woman prayed that in order that she might have her husband near her his spirit might pass into the body of one of her pets, of which she had a great many. When she was satisfied that he was dead she left the body where it lay and, weeping, went out to another room. As she opened the door she saw in the middle of the floor a tiny monkey that had just been born looking up at her with a peart face and a pair of bright eyes. Whether or not it was her imagination that made this human-like countenance appear in her eyes to resemble her late husband it is impossible to say. Certain it is that she took the little creature up in her arms and hugged it to her bosom, at the same time thanking her god that he had answered her prayer, for she did not doubt that the soul of him she loved had passed into the body of the monkey just born.

Now, the woman was rich, and this is what she did. She made a will, leaving all her property to the monkey so long as it lived, and at its death it was to go to her nephew, Rustum, a boy of whom she was very fond. She also bequeathed the monkey to a woman in whom she had great confidence, who was to have a large sum for its care as long as it lived. It was thus made the interest of its keeper to preserve its life as long as possible.

The widow lived three years after her husband's death. When she died her nephew, Rustum, was about eighteen years old and had a sweetheart. Naturally he wished to marry and needed the money.

But the woman, Dulmara, who was getting large pay for taking care of her ward, realizing that Rustum was interested in its death, redoubled her efforts to keep the monkey alive. She put it in a wing of the house, had iron bars put on all the windows, and no one was permitted to go in to it without passing through apartments occupied by herself.

But these precautions were not necessary, for Rustum had been brought up to believe that his uncle's soul was in the monkey and if he killed it he would be guilty of a crime. But Agya, the girl he wished to marry, had been to a Christian mission school and did not believe in the transmigration theory. She could not see why a monkey should prevent her and the youth she loved from enjoying a fortune. Indeed, she thought no more of killing a monkey than a dog. Besides, it was plain that Dulmara might at the monkey's death substitute another monkey in its place and keep on thus substituting monkeys till the crack of doom. She therefore determined that the little beast should die.

Fortunately for her intention, Rustum's love for her was not known to Dulmara, nor had Dulmara ever seen her.

One day Agya appeared to Dulmara and said that she had a singular dream. But before she told the dream she looked about her at the pets which were wandering around. A hen was sitting on some eggs, upon seeing which Agya told her dream. She said that a woman had appeared to her in her sleep and said that her husband's soul was in a monkey in a house which she described. The woman herself had died and passed into the body of a cow (sacred in India). The cow was about to die, and the woman's spirit had been permitted by Vishnu to be born in the house where her husband lived in a monkey's body. She would come out of an egg. The girl was instructed to go to the house described, and the first chicken hatched in that house would contain the spirit of the wife of the man whose spirit inhabited the monkey. She was to have the care of the chicken.

There is no end to the superstition in the people of India, and Dulmara believed the story. While the two were talking a wee chick picked through the shell of an egg, and this settled the matter. Dulmara did not dare to turn Agya away for fear of the wrath of the tiny bird which might contain the soul of her from whom she drew her stipend. The girl was at once taken into the household and given the care of the chicken. She took it in to see the monkey, but the little brute evidently did not recognize it as its wife, for if permitted to get at it would have eaten it.

Agya, having effected an entrance to the household as well as access to the monkey, lost no time in carrying out the rest of her plan. Soon after her arrival the monkey sickened and died the next day.

Though Agya did not admit that she had poisoned the monkey, she threw off the sham she had put on and, leaving her little ward to take care of itself, went to Rustum and told him that he had succeeded to his fortune. She believed a witness to the death of the monkey, he had no trouble in securing his property. The two were married, but Agya did not then dare to tell her husband that she had killed the monkey.

band that she had killed the monkey lest he consider her a murderess.

Years after, when she had converted him to her religion, she confessed. He was severely prepared for such a sin and in order to make him feel more comfortable she told him that his uncle had appeared to her in the form of a bird of paradise and thanked her for poisoning it.

A friend who reads these notes has recently filed one of his quarter section farms. The soil is rich and fat, and dampness has been its only drawback in past years. He laid 19,000 feet of the tile (the largest ten inch at a cost of a little less than $2,000, or $12.50 an acre. On this same farm flax was raised last season that grossed $22 per acre. From this on this farm will be the better in both dry and wet seasons for being tiled. The soil will be well drained and hence will keep sweet, while the presence of the tile will give it needed air ventilation.

In starting an asparagus bed some gardeners prefer using the two-year-old and some the one-year-old roots. Still others contend that they get a bearing bed more quickly by sowing the seed thinly in rows and then thinning them to two feet apart in the row. Whether the roots or seed is used, they should be placed in trenches about four feet apart and a foot deep. In the bottoms of which well rotted manure has been placed, and covered with three inches of mellow soil. During the season the earth should be cultivated toward the plants until the soil is level. The plants will make the more vigorous growth if nitrate of soda is scattered along the rows a couple of times during the growing season. In the fall the ground between the rows should be given a good covering of manure, and the following spring this should be chopped or raked in.

An Unprofitable Success.

Saunders Norvell told this one on himself to the state hardware dealers in convention at the Coliseum: "When I was in the jobbing business I used to pass on the street car the store of one of my customers who did not have his windows arranged in the best way to sell goods. One day I got off the car and went in and told him how to fix up the window. He listened to my arguments, but became angry with me. However, I watched his store window closely for the next week to see whether he would adopt my suggestions. He adopted them completely, but he did it with goods that he purchased from one of my competitors."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
